Cuba's health system in critical condition

HAVANA — This country's vast medical service, the pride of its socialist system, is running short of medicine and supplies. Death rates have slowly begun to rise, particularly among the elderly.

Pharmacies and hospitals throughout the island are low on penicillin and other antibiotics. Even detergent to wash hospital sheets is sometimes in short supply.

Medicines that are available often bear labels of European aid agencies, which have become significant donors of goods such as blood-pressure medicine and asthma sprays, as well as soap, toilet paper and toothpaste for hospitals.

U.S. organizations such as Pastors for Peace also have donated medicine. "The donations are helpful, but they just cannot fill the gap that has been caused by the inability of Cuba today to produce the quantity of medicine it produced in the past or the inability to buy," said Julie Feinsilver, who published in 1993 a book on Cuba's health system: "Healing the Masses."

"Things like antibiotics are in short supply and they are often only available in hospitals and for serious cases," Feinsilver, a health policy consultant, said in an interview.

Moab fire continues to burn out of control

SALT LAKE CITY — A fire that has burned 3,000 acres of grass and brush 50 miles northeast of Moab continued to burn out of control Wednesday.

The Bitter Creek fire, which started Tuesday 50 miles northeast of Moab 1 mile west of the Colorado state line, has burned more than 3,000 acres of grass and brush. Just two weeks ago, a fire consumed 4,000 acres of timber on the southeast flank of the La Sal Mountains.

No structures were threatened in the Bitter Creek fire, which was burning on federal and state land. Fire crews from nearby Grand Junction, Colo., were helping to fight the blaze. Officials did not know when to expect the fire's containment.

The National Weather Service has forecast hot, dry weather for the region through the Fourth of July weekend, with daytime highs expected to top 100 degrees.

120-degree heat wave bakes Southwest

LAUGHLIN, Nev. — Doug Simmons sagged against an open doorway leading into an air-conditioned casino and bluffed like a poker player.

"It's not hot here," Simmons, an employee at the Ramada Express hotel-casino, said Wednesday as he wiped his sweating brow. "I keep telling myself it's not hot here."

Not hot? It has been over 120 degrees this week in this gambling resort town jammed between the desert and the Colorado River. More of the same is expected in a heat wave that is baking the Southwest.

By noon Wednesday, it was 118 in Laughlin and rising. Across the cold, blue river in Bullhead City, Ariz., the mercury hit 114 at midmorning.

"When you run out there and open that locked car with the leather seats and it's 120 degrees outside, it's got to be 200 degrees inside," said Jim Adams, a valet at the Edgewater Hotel.

Area groups to present fire safety programs

The Spanish Fork Ranger District of the Uinta National Forest Service will present a series of campground programs starting Saturday that will run through Aug. 12.

"Our goal is to specifically try to inform and help the public understand what's happening around them," said Loyal Clark, public information officer for Uinta National Park. "People seem to enjoy going to something while they're camping up at Payson Lakes."

Utah County Fire Marshal Tom Wroe said his program Saturday will focus on fire prevention and how to enjoy the environment in light of the fire restriction.

Gorilla Bike and Fitness will sponsor another campground program on July 29.

"We will present a clinic on safe riding, bike maintenance, and non-impact trail riding," said Scott Painter, marketing manager for Gorilla Bike and Fitness.

The location of the programs will alternate between the Payson Lakes Campground day-use area and the Blackhawk Campground host site in Loop A, according to a Uinta National Park news release.

All programs are free to the public.

Utah bill may enforce child support payments

By ROBERT COLEMAN
Universe Staff Writer

Utah follows in the footsteps of the Maine Legislature as state representatives consider a bill that will revoke business and professional licenses of parents who repeatedly fail to make child support payments.

The bill, proposed by Utah State Rep. Russell Cannon, will go before a special committee before Nov. 1, said Joyce Allred, Utah Bureau of Child Support Services program coordinator.

When the next legislative session begins Jan. 16, it will be voted on by the main body of the House of Representatives.

In Utah, the Bureau of Child Support Services deals with over 98,000 child-support cases.

Of those cases, over half show parents behind in their payments, said Allred.

Not every case, however, is referred to the bureau.

"We deal with the hardest cases," Allred said. "People who come to us are having trouble getting their support."

Utah has a good track record in child support collection.

A Children's Defense Fund study ranks Utah 8th in the country for collecting child support, thanks in part to a new law that went into effect in January, Allred said.

Last year, the Utah Legislature passed a wage-withholding law that requires employers to withhold earnings from the paychecks of all divorced owing child support, regardless of whether the parent is delinquent.

"It is an easy, no-bother way of having child support collected," Allred said.

However, the wage-withholding law only collects payments from individuals with employers.

"It's encouraging that we'll have an effective tool, particularly in instances where people are self-employed or paid under the table and we have no other means of enforcement," Allred said.

The Utah proposal is fashioned after the Family Financial Responsibility

Act passed one year ago by the Maine Legislature.

Earlier this week, Maine's stringent new policy led to the drivers license revocation of two fathers delinquent in child support payments. On July 7, six more "deadbeat dads" will lose driving privileges.

Together, the eight divorced men owe more than $140,000 in child support.

Maine Human Services Commissioner Jane Sheehan said each man received two earlier letters telling of the possible loss of driving privileges.

"We've been warning people since last August this day would come, and now it's here," she said.

The delinquent parents can regain driving privileges by arranging back payments with the state.

Maine law also allows the revocation of professional and business licenses of delinquent parents.

The program has targeted 20,000 parents who are at least 90 days behind in child support.

Already, the threat of license revocation for failure to pay child support has led to $11.5 million in back payments, Sheehan said.

Recreational activities offered for disabled and their families

By SHAUNA WELLER
Universe Staff Writer

Thanks to the National Ability Center, this summer is full of recreational events from water-skiing to wheelchair tennis especially adapted for the disabled.

The National Ability Center, based in Park City, hosts a series of lessons, clinics and trips throughout the summer for the disabled and their families and friends.

As one of the biggest events of the summer, the NAC is sponsoring a nationwide tour, called Operation Challenge, that brings adaptive water sports for the disabled to communities across the country.

In accordance with the NAC's scheduled events, Kawasaki Motors Corp. and a team of National Handicapped Sports instructors will conduct a five-day event offering disabled people the opportunity to learn to water-ski and to ride Kawasaki JET SKI personal watercraft.

In accordance with the NAC's philosophy, which is to provide recreation for people with disabilities as well as those without, these events provide an outlet for such people to do things they otherwise wouldn't.

The participants include adults and children with orthopedic, spinal cord, neuro-muscular, visual and hearing impairment, as well as the developmentally disabled, said Debra Hart, marketing director for the NAC.

Conor Kristensen, 16, has been participating in the NAC program since he was nine years old. He began with the downhill skiing events and now water-skis, rides horses, and does many other recreational activities that his mother, Pat, never thought he'd do.

"This program has opened a whole new world of opportunities for him," Pat Kristensen said. "It provides activities which build his self-esteem through recreation."

Another event that began in May and runs through the end of the year is wheelchair basketball. There is no cost for this activity, which is held at the National Guard Army Gym in Salt Lake 6 to 8 p.m. each Thursday.

Wheelchair tennis is another activity free of charge that runs through the summer. Tennis starts at 6 p.m. each Monday and goes until dark at Liberty Park in Salt Lake.

The water skiing clinic is scheduled for July 13, 14 and 15 at the Deer Creek State Park Island Resort.

There will also be two water-ski trips held at the Deer Creek Island Resort including boat rides, skiing and lunch. The trips are scheduled for July 23 and 30 and Aug. 13, 20 and 27.

To culminate the summer of fun, the National Ability Center has two trips to Jackson Hole, Wyoming planned. The trips include meals, rafting, swimming, horseback riding, rodeos, tram rides, fishing, campfires and other entertainment.

Alternate traffic routes advised for Saturday

Universe Services

Because of the fallout hazards the fireworks display during Saturday's "Stadium of Fire," the launch area directly south and east of BYU's Cougar Stadium will be closed that evening until the area has been determined to be safe.

According to Rod Jones, chief of the Provo City Fire Department, the traffic areas to be closed include:

- * University Parkway from University Avenue to 450 East, which will close at 7:45 p.m.;
- * 450 East from 1230 North to University Parkway, which will close at 7:45 p.m.; and
- * 450 East from Stadium Avenue to University Parkway, which will close at 3 p.m.

Also, all BYU parking lots immediately south and southeast of the stadium, baseball and track and field areas and the north section of Helaman Halls, will be closed at 7:45 p.m. to all pedestrian and vehicular traffic, Jones said.

The following routes to and from the stadium are recommended:

- * Coming to the stadium from points north on I-15, take either the 800 North or Center Street Orem exit to University Avenue and University Avenue south to the stadium because the 1200 South exit off I-15 travels through the construction area.

- * Leaving the stadium for points north, travel north on University Avenue to either Orem Center Street or 800 North in Orem to I-15 as the diagonal route travels through the construction area.

Baker noted parking restrictions for the event:

- * Recreational vehicles and buses may allow people to disembark near the stadium before the roads are closed, but must park in Lot 37 (west of the Smith Fieldhouse). No buses or RVs will be allowed to park west of the stadium.
- * Disabled/handicapped parking for automobiles (no RVs or buses) is available in Lot 45 just west of the stadium, but there are only a limited number of stalls which will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. After these stalls are filled, available stalls for the public may be used until the lot is full.

Public parking is available at the Marriott Center and on the main campus. The lots south and southeast of the stadium will not be available due to the fallout area.

Because of the fire hazard, no fire-works will be allowed on Y mountain.

PATRIOTIC CELEBRATION: Temple Square is the site of Utah National Guard 23rd Army Band performance tomorrow and Saturday.

Army band to play patriotic tunes

By MICHAEL DRUMMOND
Universe Staff Writer

"Stars and Stripes Forever" will be among the favorite songs played this weekend on Temple Square as the Utah National Guard 23rd Army Band performs its annual patriotic concert.

The concert will be held both Friday and Saturday in the Tabernacle.

Admission to the concerts is free, but is limited to those eight years of age and older.

"There are not too many halls more enjoyable to play in than the Tabernacle," said Norman K. Wendell, the Band's director.

Participants will hear songs ranging from march, folk, patriotic, and Broadway favorites, said Carroll Smith, executive secretary of the concert series.

"For the audience it is a great thing to hear," Wendell said.

Doors open at 6:30 and the concert begins at 7:30, Smith said. Those who want good seats should be there when the doors open.

"There are always a lot of out-of-towners visiting Temple Square who are very appreciative of the concert," said Vernon K. Bird, a trumpet player in the band.

"These concerts are very appropriate for this time of year," said Jan Hyde a percussion player in the band. "And every year the concerts are very well received." The band has been performing this patriotic concert on Temple Square since 1981, Smith said.

The members of the band come from all walks of life: policemen, firemen, school teachers, and nurses, Hyde said.

There is a tremendous comradery in the band, Bird said. It can truly be called a family affair.

"My son plays in the band, too," Bird said. "There are at least two other band members whose children also play in the band with them."

The band will also be performing in the Fourth of July parade in Provo, Hyde said.

NO BUYER'S REMORSE

Don't you hate getting talked into something that you regret buying the next week? We've all known the frustration of finding out a "great buy" wasn't the bargain some smooth salesman led us to believe it was, and you don't want to make this mistake on something as important as a wedding ring.

We promise this won't happen at Wilson Diamonds. From the very beginning we've been committed to a "No Buyer's Remorse" policy. For you, that policy means no wishy-washy price quotes. No technical mumbo-jumbo. No rationalized exaggerations. And no pressuring you into a decision, even if we think it's the right one. Instead, you'll be shown the best selection of rings imaginable to ensure finding your perfect nuance of style.

You'll also get guaranteed prices-and straight answers. But, getting straight answers first requires knowing the right questions. "No Buyer's Remorse" means we'll even help you learn the right questions. That's why for 19 years the only remorse we've come to expect at Wilsons is from our competitors.

Police target 4th for DUI busts

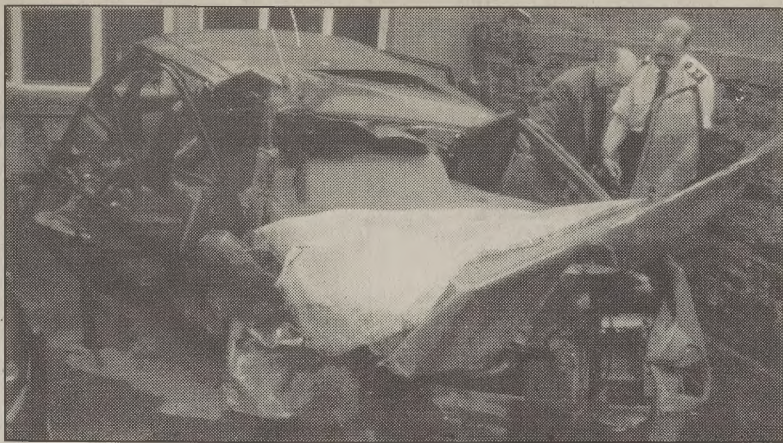

By DAVID GARRETT
Universe Staff Writer

The number of sobriety checkpoints on all Utah County roads will increase in support of National Sobriety Checkpoint Week, which began Wednesday, said Lt. Alex Hunt, Provo Police Department patrol division commander.

At the checkpoints, police will ask for a current driver's license and registration and then make a quick safety inspection, Hunt said. If alcohol is smelled or if open containers are visible, the process will continue.

Connie Harton, president of Utah Mothers Against Drunk Driving, said checkpoints are effective. Many enforcement agencies will also conduct "saturated patrols" using extra patrol officers who are looking for nothing but DUIs — people driving under the influence of alcohol.

Independence Day firework injuries can be prevented

By DARCY KIRKHAM
Universe Staff Writer

The minor accidents and fires that often occur during Fourth of July celebrations can be prevented if precautions are taken.

Dennis Moss, Provo City fire marshal, said the Provo Fire Department will be busy all day responding to calls of fires started by fireworks.

Lynne Facer, Director of Marketing and Operations for Lantis Fireworks and Lasers, said, "It is important that people remember that these are explosives. They have a potential for danger that people overlook."

Keith Hooker, Director of Emergency Services for Utah Valley

Regional Medical Center, said the most common firework accidents are minor burns and eye injuries.

Last year, Hooker treated 20 to 25 patients with debris in their eyes from the fireworks display at the Stadium of Fire.

Hooker said patients come in the emergency room with heat exhaustion and sunburns caused by lack of proper precautions.

The National Fire Protection Association said injuries have decreased over the past few years, but still occur because even sparklers can cause physical harm.

Safety precaution recommendations by the NFPA include keeping a fire extinguisher nearby, placing fireworks on a flat surface before lighting and wearing long pants and long sleeves.

A Provo Fire Department safety pamphlet says fireworks should never be carried in pockets or shot from metal or glass containers.

For the best display of fireworks, NFPA suggests letting professionals provide the entertainment.

If fireworks are bought over the counter, they should not look old, stained or mishandled, fire protection association officials said.

It is safer to use legal fireworks, but legal fireworks are limited in Utah, Facer said.

"Most of the things you buy over the counter should be legal," Facer said. "Illegal items include M-80s, cherry bombs and the large firecrackers with extra powder in them."

LDS cannery gives food to needy

By WADE MCAFERTY
Universe Staff Writer

United Way of Utah County and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are pooling their resources in ongoing canning projects to help individuals and families in Utah County become self-sufficient.

The most recent phase of this relationship is a canning project at the Church's Lindon Cannery this week. Twenty volunteers are canning and labeling 10,800 cans of ham and beans.

Agent Cannery Stake President Richard Eddy said both LDS and non-LDS volunteers and recipients of food items are participating.

"These volunteers want to do the service to receive the goods," said Bill Hulterstrom, president of United Way of Utah County. "This gives those in need an opportunity to do that."

The ham and beans canned in this project, and the cans of stew the Church is donating to United Way of Utah County, will provide more than 40,000 meals for local residents.

The Lindon cannery manager, Kelsey Ruse, said the idea of using the canneries' resources in the community emerged when Elder Robert D. Hales of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles spoke with black leaders to assist them at the time of the Los Angeles riots.

Then, Elder Hales took the idea to the Church's Welfare Program.

The cans of food will be distributed to the Center for Women and Children in Crisis, Community Action Food Bank, Utah Valley Food and Shelter Coalition, Recreation and Rehabilitation Services, Family Support and Treatment Center, Alpine House and American Red Cross.

Ruse said the beans used in the project come from welfare farms in Idaho. He said the ham is also a welfare item cured in a BYU meat laboratory.

Clinton opposes health review of disability recipients

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trying to control explosive growth of disability payments, Congress wants to stop giving benefits to people who have recovered their health.

The Clinton administration is fighting legislation that would do just that, on grounds that the measure would actually cost more than it would save.

Many lawmakers believe regular reviews by Social Security would deter fraud and save millions by cutting off benefits to people who are well enough to work.

The requirement is included in legislation establishing Social Security as an agency independent of Health and Human Services. The House and Senate approved similar versions of the bill earlier this year with unanimous votes, and congressional negotiators must now draft a compromise.

HHS Secretary Donna Shalala, in a June 22 letter to the negotiators obtained by The Associated Press, said she "strongly opposes" requirements that Social Security periodically review the health of teen-agers and working-age adults who collect Supplemental Security Income.

SSI provides monthly disability benefits to 4.4 million low-income people at a cost of $19.2 billion a year.

Although people must be totally disabled to qualify for SSI, some conditions respond to therapy, medicine or surgery. Lawmakers complain that the program now guarantees lifetime benefits for virtually all recipients because Social Security's oversight is so weak.

"Once these people go on disability they're basically going to be on it for the rest of their lives unless we periodically check to be sure they warrant receiving disability," said Rep. Wally Herger, R-Calif., a House Ways and Means Committee member who supports the reviews.

"Reviewing cases is one of the best ways to make sure the system is achieving its intended purposes," said Rep. Gerald D. Kleczka, D-Wis.

Social Security officials say they have no estimate of the number of potentially healthy recipients on the rolls.

Shalala's figures suggest the agency could save $294 million over five years by discontinuing benefits to those who have recovered. She argues that finding them would cost $992 million.

Lawmakers say Social Security has found that screening disabled workers who receive disability insurance under a separate program saves far more than it costs.

The General Accounting Office has estimated at least 30,000 ineligible people may be getting money under the program for disabled workers.

Simpson's defense get ready for today's hearing

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The best hope for the defense at O.J. Simpson's preliminary hearing is to undermine the case of the prosecution by planting the idea in the public's mind that police have arrested the wrong man.

"Certainly, if he could stop the train at this point and avoid a trial, the nightmare would go away. But that's not realistic," Loyola University Law School Professor Laurie Levenson said.

Even defense lawyer Robert Shapiro has acknowledged it's likely Simpson will be held for trial.

Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block disclosed that Simpson is receiving 3,500 pieces of mail a day and seems to have adjusted to his life as celebrity prisoner.

Simpson was taken off suicide watch a few days ago, Block said.

With no eyewitnesses, the prosecution in the Simpson case will depend heavily on the work of laboratory detectives.

Under the law, Levenson said, "The prosecution bears the burden of establishing that it's more likely than not that the defendant committed the crime."

During the preliminary hearing Simpson faces today, rumors and innuendo are forbidden; hard evidence will be the issue. A judge must decide if sufficient reason exists to hold him for trial on two counts of first-degree murder.

Simpson's high-priced legal team promises a vigorous challenge to accusations that Simpson wielded the knife that killed his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12.

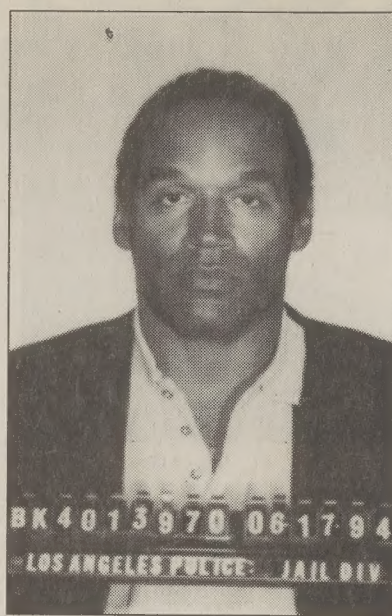

Citing California law, Levenson explained Municipal Judge Kathleen

Kennedy-Powell's role at the preliminary hearing. "The magistrate is not a trier of fact," the law says.

"He or she does not decide whether the defendant committed the crime, but only whether there is some rational ground for assuming the possibility that an offense has been committed and the accused is guilty of it."

Prosecutors refused to release a witness list Wednesday, but Levenson, a former federal prosecutor, said law enforcement officers, forensic experts and the person who found the bodies of Ms. Simpson and Goldman are likely to lead off the parade of witnesses.

The case has created such a sensation that it will be broadcast live. But devotees of movie and courtroom drama hoping for fireworks may have to sit through some mundane procedural moments waiting for Shapiro's cross-examination.

Arafat plans to visit Palestinian territory

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat made a surprise decision Wednesday to make his historic return to Palestinian territory this weekend — his first visit since Palestinian autonomy began in May.

A senior Israeli official said Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government had approved a three-day visit beginning Saturday.

"The prime minister decided tonight to allow this visit after considering all security considerations," said Yossi Sarid, environment minister.

Rabin's initial reaction to the announcement was that a visit might not be possible on such short notice. Rabin gave the go-ahead after studying the matter, Sarid said.

The declaration exemplified Arafat's flair for the dramatic, catching top PLO figures and Israeli officials alike off guard.

Nabil Shaath, the PLO's top negotiator, said Arafat gave him the news late Tuesday. Shaath, who is in Egypt, notified Israel's government on Wednesday that Arafat planned to visit the self-rule zones in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

Senior aides and PLO officials at Arafat's headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia, said they were not aware of his plans to travel to Gaza, only to Cairo.

Arafat's announcement electrified Jewish settlers and right-wing Israeli groups, who vowed to stage mass protests against a man they called a "master terrorist" and "modern-day Hitler."

"This is a national embarrassment, allowing a murderer to enter Gaza and Jericho," said Benjamin Netanyahu, leader of the opposition Likud bloc, predicting Arafat would try to go to Jerusalem.

Israel claims all of the city, including the Arab sector captured in the 1967 Mideast War, as its capital.

Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert said he believed Arafat might try to sneak into Jerusalem on the Sabbath, when religious Jews would not be able to organize a demonstration.

Aharon Domb, spokesman for the Settlers Council, said settlers planned demonstrations and were seeking a ruling from leading rabbis to permit protests on the Sabbath.

"Arafat is the master terrorist, and we will do what we can to make sure that life in this country will be disrupted," Domb said.

Rabbi Shlomo Goren, a former chief rabbi of Israel, said the PLO leader was responsible for shedding the blood of thousands of Jews.

"We have to consider him a modern-day Hitler, and we have to bring him to trial," Goren said.

Shaath said there were "many positive signs" in recent days that paved the way for Arafat's trip.

"Mr. Arafat took a lot of risks in the struggle to go home, so this will not be a deterrent. But for sure our police are preparing for all the security requirements," Shaath said.

"It is a historic day that Palestinian people have waited for a long time," said Dr. Ahmed Tibi, an Arafat adviser. "It symbolizes the beginning of a long trip for reconstruction and independence."
